

Andreas Durisch

Senior Partner

Andreas Durisch (1954) is a proven communications expert with strong experience in consulting, media relations and training. His work focuses on advising companies and organizations on their relationships with politics, the public and the media. He supports high-profile individuals as a sparring partner for public appearances and media contacts. His strengths are analysis, conceptual thinking and precise implementation. Andreas Durisch manages mandates in the services sector (finance, media, real estate), in the industrial sector (public transport), and for public institutions.

Durisch has deep knowledge of the Swiss media scene and its mechanisms. He has worked in the journalism industry for 25 years and was editor-in-chief of SonntagsZeitung (1997–2010). Additionally, he has worked as editor-in-chief of the news magazine FACTS and the family magazine Schweizer Familie.

He holds a diploma in teaching and completed a degree in journalism from MAZ Lucerne as well as management training at Columbia University's Graduate School of Business in New York.
